The smelter for Wabuska looks like a sure thing now, the Salt Lake interests which are financing the project having made all arrangements for that end of the proposition. Material is arriving at the smelter site at Wabuska now for the erection of quarters for the men to be employed on the work and as soon as these preliminaries are accomplished actual construction of the smelter will start.

RAY BAKER IS BACK FROM TRIP TO OLD COUNTRY

After an absence of 10 months, Ray Baker of Tonopah, known from one end of Nevada to the other, and who has figured in nearly every mining boom since the days of Goldfield, returned to Reno Tuesday night, having arrived from New York last Friday on the Mauretania from London and Paris. Baker was one of those who saw the Paris flood at its worst and the story of his travels is of interest, says the Reno Journal.

"The flood was a stupendous calamity," said Baker. "It has left thousands upon thousands destitute and the French people will be severely taxed to recover from its effects. The condition was even worse than the cable reports would indicate and the property loss has been almost incalculable. It is only recently that a semblance of order has been restored and the poor provided for by the government. Millions of money have come in from all parts of the world and it is now being disbursed with greater system and effectiveness.

"The fear now is that a pestilence or outbreak of many forms of sickness will further cripple the people, because of the encroachments of the flood waters in the vast network of underground passages in the city."

"Concerning his observations of financial conditions as reflected in the European capitals and London, Mr. Baker expressed the idea that the flurry caused by Wall street, in an attempt to coerce President Taft on the question of trust investigation, was having an unfavorable effect on American industrialists.

"The Europeans are just recovering confidence in American industrialists," said Mr. Baker, "and this evidence of uncertainty is having a bad effect.

"The same thing may be observed in New York and the east. The commotion that is being caused by the country. The people in the east are getting tired of republican rule, with its constant financial uncertainty, and I believe the next president will be a democrat and that there will be a democratic landslide from top to bottom.

"In London there are great preparations to receive Roosevelt, who will be welcomed officially and by the British people as perhaps no other man in private life has been honored since General Grant's time. The king will have T. R. as his guest. The lord mayor of London will turn over the keys of the city and there will be a great outpouring of the people."

Mr. Baker is on his way to Rawhide, to see after some interests there, whence he will return to his home in Tonopah.

RIVALS TRY TO DECIDE LOVE AFFAIR WITH GUNS

According to reports reaching Reno from Portola, the new division town of the Western Pacific in Plumas county, Cal., residents of that place were treated to a lively time on Monday night. So the story goes a Missourian and a Greek had a fight over a love affair. The Greek opened hostilities by throwing the Missourian down the stairs of a young lady's home. The Missourian opened fire with a six-shooter and the Greek returned it, fifteen shots being fired, but neither man was hit. Friends of the rivals prevented further trouble.

TO CONTINUE DOUBLE TRACKING LUCIN CUT-OFF

As the result of the visit to Lakeside Monday with Vice President and General Manager Bancroft and Superintendent Manson of the Salt Lake division of the Southern Pacific, Mr. Hood recommended the continuation of the double tracking of the line for at least 5,000 feet on the west side of the lake, which has been under progress for some time. This stretch of track, which drops about five feet from the line of the trestle, will also be raised and the new grade maintained for some distance on the west approach to the lake.

The work of widening the line requires the use of several hundred employees, three work trains and three steam shovels at the big gravel and ballast pit at Lakeside.

As rapidly as the line is widened the track-laying gang will place the new steel. The grade of the new line will be raised to the new level of five feet. When the second track is laid and ballasted it will be used for traffic while the other track is being raised to its level. It is stated that eventually the entire "fill" will be double tracked.

The construction of breakwaters on each side of the "fill" in order to protect it from the waves during a storm is being considered at the present time by the engineering department of the road, but no definite conclusion has been reached. Several methods for the construction of a breakwater are being considered, which includes those similar to what the government has constructed at the mouth of the Columbia river, an Pedro harbor and the sea wall at Galveston, Texas.—Ogden Examiner.

TRAPPER HAS EXCITING FIGHT WITH GRIZZLY

Percy Nash, the Manhattan mining man, who is spending a few days in this city, yesterday received word of a narrow escape from death at the hands of a grizzly bear, experienced by an old-time Alaskan friend of his. The information was contained in a clipping from the Portland Oregonian, which is as follows:

Never a battle of the many fights between man and beast in the Far North was more exciting and perilous than the struggle recently waged against a giant grizzly by James M. Christie, a Yukon trapper, who is now on his way here.

The encounter took place on the headwaters of the Stewart river. Christie had tracked the bear several miles to punish him for ravaging one of his caches. He had just fired a bullet at a wolf and stood adjusting the sight, when he heard a crackling behind him and turned to see a huge shape advancing on a run. He had rarely time to draw a bead on the animal's head and fire twice, when it was upon him.

Christie tried to leap from his snowshoes and dodge to one side, but it was too late and the bear swept him to the ground with a blow of his huge forepaw. The bear bit him on the head and then tore at his face with his claws. In his agony Christie thrust his right arm down the grizzly's throat, and as he was vainly trying to force its jaws apart, the grizzly fell dead. The two bullets which the trapper fired into his body had apparently taken effect.

The man's cheeks were severed from the ears to the mouth and his lower jaw fell against his breast. His jawbone was fractured and his right arm broken. There were cuts galore about his chest and head, the scalp being almost torn off. He managed to crawl several miles to his cabin on Rogue river. Here, when his partner returned after several hours' absence, a few rude bandages were put on the wounds and preparations were made to take Christie to a trading post, 50 miles away.

After a four days' journey, with the injured man on a sled hauled by two Indians, the party reached Ferrell's post, where Mr. Ferrell did his best at doctoring the wounds. Strange to say, the hunter recovered, although his jaw will not close and the scars, through lack of proper medical attention, stand out like great furrows on his skin. The broken right arm is also in a bad state and it is in order to have this and his jaw reset that he is making the southern trip.
